To whom it may concern:

In the 2021 City Budget proposal, the Pensacola Police Department receives roughly 40% of the allocated funds while services that can improve the daily lives of Pensacola citizens are left severely underfunded. Human services, Parks & Recreation, Transportation and the Economic Environment combined receive approximately ten million dollars less than the Police Department budget. The Police Department budget features many redundancies and an emphasis on patrolling neighborhoods. Improvements to economic conditions, mental health services and accessible activities for Pensacola's youth would do more to curb criminal activity in Pensacola than additional patrolling by police through neighborhoods already struggling with a pandemic. This is a call to reallocate funds to work for the citizens of Pensacola, as well as to divest some of the additional responsibilities of the Pensacola Police Department to differently equipped departments who can better handle non-criminal issues in our community.

Good afternoon,

My name is Emily Echevarria and I have lived in Pensacola for almost 30 years. I believe the 2021 City Budget is an opportunity for our city's leaders to truly invest in a better future for our community. The combined funding for human services, parks and recreation, transportation, and economic environment areas receive $10 million LESS than the police budget.

The Police Department has identified neighborhood patrols as a main cost. However, improvements to economic conditions and mental health services for citizens would do far more to curb criminal activity than additional patrolling by police through neighborhoods already struggling with a pandemic. I urge you to reallocate funds and create a budget that works for all Pensacola citizens, as well as a call to divest some Pensacola Police's responsibilities to differently-equipped departments who can better handle non-criminal issues in our community.

Sincerely,
Emily Echevarria

Greetings,

My name is Dr. Cassandra Cusack Curbelo.

I am writing to ask the city to please reallocate funds away from police and into services with more community impact such as assisting and rehabilitating parents who are struggling rather than removing their children from their home; funds for citizens economically unable to exit a domestic partnership; healthcare, schooling, anti-bullying and harassment education, job training, community gardens. Anything that would serve the citizens over the current model.

Pensacola's Police Department receives roughly 40% of the proposed 2021 City Budget while services that would improve life for most Pensacola citizens remain severely underfunded. Human Services, Parks & Recreation, Transportation and the Economic Environment areas combined receive nearly ten million dollars less than the police budget. The Police Department emphasizes neighborhood patrols as main cost. But improvements to economic conditions, mental health services, and activities for Pensacola's citizens would do far more than police patrols to curb criminal activity in the city than additional patrolling by police through neighborhoods already struggling with a pandemic. This is a call to reallocate funds and create a budget that works for all Pensacola citizens, as well as a call to divest some Pensacola Police's responsibilities to differently-equipped departments who can better handle non-criminal issues in our community.

Sincerely

Cassandra Cusack Curbelo, MD

Hello,

My name is Marley Wells. I'm reaching out with some input on how the Pensacola City Budget could be used to help the local community. Pensacola's Police Department receives roughly 40% of the proposed 2021 City Budget while services that would improve life for most Pensacola citizens remain severely underfunded. Human Services, Parks & Recreation, Transportation and the Economic Environment areas combined receive nearly ten million dollars less than the police budget. This is a call to reallocate funds to invest in community resources including mental health programs, public transportation, youth programs, homelessness services, restitution funds for victims of police violence, and storm preparation - to create a budget that works for all Pensacola citizens, as well as a call to divest some Pensacola Police's responsibilities to differently-equipped departments who can better handle non-criminal issues in our community. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Marley

Good afternoon. I'd like to voice my opinion concerning the Police section of the budget. Particularly, I believe that a better way to allocate budgetary funds would be to reallocate 50% of the Police Budget and invest those funds in community resources such as mental health programs, public transportation, youth programs, homelessness services, restitution funds for victims of police violence, and storm preparation.

Thank you for reading,

Jill Marlowe

To whom it may concern:

In the 2021 City Budget proposal, the Pensacola Police Department receives over 40% of the allocated funds. Human services, Parks & Recreation, Transportation and the Economic Environment combined receive approximately ten million dollars less than the Police Department budget. The Police Department budget features many redundancies and an emphasis on patrolling neighborhoods. Improvements to economic conditions, mental health services and accessible activities for Pensacola's youth would do more to curb criminal activity in Pensacola than additional patrolling by police through neighborhoods already struggling with a pandemic. As an educator, the greatest need I see in my community is a lack of resources for the children, lack of city money funnelled into the schools, lack of well kept affordable or free community centers, sports programs and other activities. We have to better invest in our children to have the city we want to see.

This is a call to reallocate funds to work for the citizens of Pensacola, as well as to divest some of the additional responsibilities of the Pensacola Police Department to differently equipped departments who can better handle non-criminal issues in our community.

A concerned citizen and educator,
Dashaun
